Fuller Account of J. Calvin Corlie's Death

High Bridge, N. J., August 19 (Special).—J. Calvin Corlie of Reading, a traveling salesman, representing Witter Brothers, cigar manufacturers of Sheridan, Pa., was found dead in front of Evergreen Cemetery, near Clinton. Shortly before this he had informed a Clinton physician who passed by and saw him sitting there that he was tired and only resting. He sat between two suit cases, which he had been carrying. The body was discovered by an automobile party from Glen Gardner. Heart disease was the cause of death. Coroner Conover of Lebanon viewed the remains and granted a burial permit. Later the body was removed to undertaking rooms in Clinton, where it was prepared for shipment to Mr. Corlie's home. Mr. Corlie was well and favorably known in High Bridge, where he had visited the principal stores for years, selling cigars. He was here on Tuesday and dined at the American Hotel. In the evening he started to walk from this place to Clinton. He appeared at that time to be enjoying his usual health.

Deceased resided at 302 South Sixteenth Street, Reading. He was about 47 years of age and was a resident of Reading for many years and was a member of St. Paul's Reformed Church.

Surviving are his widow, Grace (nee Bomgardner); one daughter, Marian; two brothers, John Corlie of Bedford, Pa., William of Pittsburgh, and a sister, Mrs. J. O. Smith of Bedford.

The remains were brought to Reading at 12:05 p. m. today. They were accompanied from High Bridge by a brother-in-law, Philip Bomgardner of West Reading, who, upon hearing of the demise of his relative, went to New Jersey to claim the remains.

Mr. Corlie was one of the best known cigar salesmen on the road. In Reading he had a wide acquaintance and was highly regarded.

The remains were met at the Franklin Street Station by Undertaker F. F. Seidel and conveyed to the family residence.

Mr. Corlie learned the trade of printing in The Gazette office in the 80's and served as journeyman several years afterward. He was one of Bedford's gifted tenor singers, possibly the best tenor singer ever developed from the town. He sang in the Court House in the early days of the County Institute with his friend, L. A. Cook. The two were known as Cook and Corlie singers. Many teachers no doubt remember of this branch of the Institute's music.

The 24th annual reunion of the 55th Pennsylvania Regiment Association was held at Indiana, Pa., on Wednesday, August 25, in the parlors of the Hon. M. C. It was a grand surprise to the ladies who appreciated the presents very much.

The reunion for 1916 was asked for at Indiana again. As the Sons of Veterans will hold their Department Encampment there in June, it is expected that the G. A. Richards—Hoover

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hoover in New Paris on Thursday, August 26th, at which time their daughter, Ethel Pearl, became the wife of Neff P. Richards.

The bride is a graduate of West Chester State Normal School, class of 1912. She has taught in Napier Township and also in Bryn Mawr and the past two years has been a successful teacher in the schools of Bedford.

The groom is the Junior member of the well-known A. C. Richards and Son Fruit Growing firm. He has attended California State Normal School as well as Pennsylvania State College. For some time he has been successfully operating a large part of the company's business.

At eleven o'clock sharp, as the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march pealed forth the bridal party marched into the drawing room, where the color scheme of pink and white with dark green background had been artistically carried out. Here in the presence of a large number of invited guests, the ring ceremony was used.

The bride was attired in white Crepe de Chine and wore the customary bridal veil. She carried a large bouquet of roses. The groom wore the conventional black. The maid of honor, bridesmaid and flower girl where all dressed in pink and carried pink and white flowers.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Rose, pastor of the New Paris Methodist Episcopal Church. Miss Jessie Hoover and Miss Ada Hunt, popular Bedford teachers, acted as maid of honor and bride's maid respectively. Faustina Hoover, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Sewell Suters acted as usher. Miss Nellie Oldham of Alum Bank presided at the piano. The path of the bride was strewn with flowers by Miss Dorothy Bowser, niece of the bride.

The bride received many useful and valuable presents. After the wedding luncheon the bride and groom left for a week's trip to Harrisburg, Niagara Falls, Pittsburgh and other places of interest. On their return they will reside at the "Hope Fruit Farm" where they will be "at home" to their friends after October 1st.

Meeting of Job Mann Trust

At the quarterly meeting of the Job Mann Trust held this week the allowance to beneficiaries of the trust was increased from $100 per year to $150 per year. The money to pay the allowance granted by this Board is derived from a trust fund which was created by Hon. Job Mann many years ago. The total amount of the fund is $25,000 and under the will of Mr. Mann the income of this fund is to be used for the education of poor young men of Bedford county for the Christian ministry. This fund is administered by a Board of Trustees appointed by the President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Bedford County and this Advisory Board passes upon the qualifications of applicants and determines the amount of aid to be given. There are five beneficiaries of this fund at the present time and the income is sufficient to support several other beneficiaries. There are no restrictions as to denomination so long as the applicant desires to become a minister in some evangelical church.

E. F. Madore, Esq., is Secretary of the Board and if there are any young men in the county who are qualified under the will and rules of the Board to receive aid, they should correspond with the Secretary.

The fund has aided a large number of young men in securing their education and as a result is doing much good for the betterment of humanity.

A Successful Musical

The musical given in Assembly Hall Tuesday evening was one of exceptional merit.

The artistic manner in which the various program numbers were rendered by our home talent was a matter of most favorable comment.

As an introductory number to the musical proper an overture was rendered upon the Victrola which was manipulated by Fred S. Sammel from whom the instrument was purchased for use in the First Primary School, Bedford.

Miss L. M. Bain, teacher.

The program as published in last week's issue was carried out in full.

The evening's gross receipts were $50. The assistance given by the general public to further such a worthy object is evidence of an appreciation of that which aims at the highest in culture for the child as well as for those of riper years.

NOT ENOUGH CHILDREN

ever receive the proper balance of food to sufficiently nourish both body and brain during the growing period when nature's demands are greater than in mature life. This is shown in so many pale faces, lean bodies, frequent colds, and lack of ambition.

For all such children we say with unmistakable earnestness: They need Scott's Emulsion, and need it now. It possesses in concentrated form the very food elements to enrich their blood. It changes weakness to strength, it makes them sturdy and strong. No alcohol.

WAR AGAINST ALCOHOL.

"Get on the water wagon!" is now the slogan of the New York health department. Its head, Dr. Sigismund S. Goldwater, says that "anything which affects the health of the people of a city is a subject of concern to the health officials," and in accordance with this view he has declared war on liquor. "It is nonsense," he says, "to go on fighting disease and crime if we don't do something to abolish the chief factor in causation. There are too many people sick from liquor in New York city—that's enough for me. . . . I want it understood that this is to be a real fight. It is not enough to make occasional deprecatory mention of alcohol and its results; we must have a definite anti-alcohol program. The work of the health department in this field will henceforth be systematic, aggressive and unrelenting." Every means of publicity will be utilized in this campaign. It will be spectacular and in the vernacular, the rich man's champagne and highballs, as well as the poor man's "third rail" whisky and beer, will be the object of attack.

For months the New York state board of health has been giving out to the press of the state, under the title "Health Hints," strong statements concerning the injurious effects of alcohol. Therefore the action now taken by the New York city board is not a great surprise. It is being warmly commended by members of the medical profession, and without doubt health officials of other cities will follow the lead.

CHICAGO GOING DRY.

Billy Sunday's message to Chicago to the effect that "Batter Booze has three balls and two strikes called on him," prompted Chicago Tribune to interview some of the downtown saloonkeepers. This what one oldtimer said:

"Three balls and two strikes isn't putting it strong enough. The bat's half swung on the third strike now, way over the ball. You can go from one end of the loop to the other and crisscross, and you won't find a single saloonkeeper making money. In some-where between three and five years this town's going to be dry as Evanston. The women are going to do it, and I don't much blame them. It's the women the thing's hit. Who suffers when a 'good fellow' making $18 a week, shows his sporting blood by spending four or five of it over the bar on pay day? Say, it's a tragedy for that woman! So, what's she going to do? Just stop it, put her foot down and her vote down. Three balls and two strikes, eh? You can just call that third strike now."

"There's no doubt about it," said another, "Chicago is going dry. We all know that, and so far as we are concerned down here in the loop, it might as well be dry now."

DO IT ALONE.

The Rotary club of Manchester, England, recently gave a dinner at midday to Harry Lauder, the comedian. A Scottish menu was served in his honor, the haggis figuring prominently. The "Cock o' the North" was duly played by a piper and on the table were beer, wine and spirits.

Said Harry to his hosts:

"We, as Rotarians, meet as a business proposition in the middle of the day, when drink is not necessary. You may take one, two or three and go back to business 'muzzy.' You can't do your business if you are in a state of 'muzziness.' When you have finished you can drink as much as you like but do it alone. If you are going to hell, go by yourself; don't drag anyone with you. I have gone into clubs—not often, thank God—and seen a fellow come in when every other place was closed. He was regarded as a jolly good fellow, and everybody clapped him on the back and laughed. Did his people at home laugh?"

PROHIBITION PROHIBITS.

Incidentally, one of the interesting results of the prohibition sweep which is causing comment here is indicated by the New York stock market reports, says a Washington (D. C.) correspondent. About ten months ago the shares of the Distilleries Securities company were quoted around nineteen and twenty—and on one occasion twenty-two. Then they tobogganed down to fourteen, fluctuated there a short time, and took other drops, until they were quoted two and a half and five and a half. This is the lowest record ever reached, and is credited to the fact that many distilleries in the dry and prospectively dry states have gone into voluntary liquidation, while in Ohio and Illinois many brewery companies have been placed in the hands of receivers.

HAVE YOU NOTICED?

"Did you ever notice," says an exchange, "that when the booze interests want to put one over on the people they always work under an alias? Manufacturers' and Dealers' association is a fair sample. Also they always clothe their proposition in a high sounding and pleasing name—a catchy name—such as 'Home Rule.' And did you ever notice how many ignoramus 'fall' for such a name? Isn't it strange that such a powerful interest never presents a square front, but always proceeds by circumvention?"

DAIRY FACTS

COW TESTING HELPS FARMER

Members of Associations Enabled to Hire Tester to Keep Records—Expense Is Not Great.

(By PROF. OSCAR ERF, Ohio State University.)

Year after year many farmers milk cows that do not pay for the feed that they eat. Cow testing associations assist the farmer in finding out those cows that cost him money to keep and those that are making money for him. Some cows start their lactation period with a heavy milk flow, but soon drop to an ordinary flow. Other cows give a more regular flow throughout the year. At the end of the year the latter cows will have probably produced the most milk, but the farmer very often will consider the cows that started well the most profitable. The main purpose of cow testing associations is to enable the members to hire a tester to keep records which, in practice, it is almost impossible for farmers to keep for themselves. Another feature of the tester's work is to work out for the farmers the most economical rations for their herds. The expense to the members of the association will be $1.50 per year for each cow in their herds.

To many farmers it may seem unnecessary to hire a man to do work which they are perfectly capable of doing. Many farmers are unquestionably able to do this work, but it is unlikely that, during the pressure of farm work, they will do it. Experience has made the tester rapid and accurate. He has at his finger ends the strength of the acid he uses, the amount to charge for roughage and concentrated feeds, and the analysis of the common feeds. It will take the average farmer some time to become familiar enough with the things to do the work as well as the tester. Not only do the tester's records show which cows make or lose money for their owners, but they show to what extent each cow is profitable and what kind of feed at the prevailing price produces the most economic returns.

ATTACHMENT ON COW'S TAIL

Prevents Introduction of Dirt, Dust and the Like Into Pail During Milking Operation.

The Scientific American in describing a cow's tail holder, invented by E. Quick of Trinidad, Colo., says:

The main object of the invention is to secure the tail of a cow that the animal may not switch its tail in an effort to rid itself of insects, such as flies, mosquitos, gnats, etc. It is well known that cows switch their tails continually, either to brush off insects, or from a nervous habit, and this tends to brush foreign matter, such as dirt, dust, and the like into the pail during milking, particularly when the tail is filled with the filth of the yard or pasture. The invention prevents such milk contamination.

Foundation for Separator.

A good, solid foundation is very essential to the smooth running of a separator, to be sure, but the separator must not be bolted down solid to the foundation. Just simply screw it down tight and level, care being taken not to have it down too tight.

Feeding the Dairy Cow.

When feeding the dairy cow remember that she cannot do two things with the same feed—that is, she cannot make beef and milk at the same time.

DAIRY NOTES

A good cow can be raised cheaper than she can be purchased.

If the mother is worth keeping the calf should be worth raising.

Use the Babcock test and know the good cows from the poor ones.

Keep the cream as near 60 degrees as possible while waiting for the churn.

If a patron will not dairy in a business way, is it surprising he finds no money in it?

Every helper should have a chance to prove her worth in the dairy before being slaughtered.

Every purebred cow does not make money. Keep records and see if every one of your cows pays for its keep.

The Vacationist Returns

In Trim Tailored Suit or Princess Frock She Livens Fifth Avenue Once More

The High Collar Bids For Favor

New York September 1, 1915. The first crisp days of September find our Avenue taking a new sprightliness, not that it is ever particularly dull or deserted, but there is a different spirit. Summer visitors have gone their various ways, and New Yorkers have returned, ready to take up city life again with its endless activities. The shops are showing the fall and winter fashions; the dressmaking establishments have lost their lazy calm and delivery wagons are loading up and starting off on trips from shop to home with creations of furrier, tailor, modiste and shoemaker.

The Dignity of Tailored Garments

Soft, fluffy things do very well for warm days; one relaxes and is cool, happy, and delightfully feminine. But with the first days of fall, the tailored dress or suit is donned with a feeling that is almost akin to relief, American women, especially, find the tailored suit or dress becoming and satisfying. There is a trimness of line and a feeling of being well dressed that lends her added dignity.

Princess Frock High in Favor

Strong rivals to the coat and skirt are the Princess frocks of serge, gabardine or whipcord; serge leads. While trim and straight, these do not follow exactly the lines of the Princess of some seasons back; they are usually belted, sometimes puffed and yoked. Belts play an important part this season. Few costumes but show them, on the Princess they are often merely half belts, that is, they extend from side front to side back, separated by a panel at front and back. This flat, smooth appearance in front and back is one of the new notions this season; all pleats and gathers are confined over the hips.

Many of the tailored coat suits have belts of patent or shiny motor leather. These are often ornamented harmoniously with applique designs of colored suede, the soft, dull harmony of the suede makes effective contrast and lends a distinctive touch to the suit. One sees, also belts of the same material as suit or dress, piped sometimes with suede, patent leather, or a vivid color; the effect is smart and attractive. Buttons, too, lend their aid in bringing in the bright touch of contrast that is required this season in our smart dark costumes.

There are some wonderfully attractive buttons of galalith, mother of pearl rimmed with color, bright green, blue or rose, and numberless other novelties in form and coloring. On an imported suit of tweed displayed recently in one of our smart shops, I noticed some extremely smart buttons of woven leather, with loops of leather for the shanks; they blended beautifully with the dark brown mixture of the tweed and were really the chief attraction of the suit. These, however, are decided novelties and probably cannot be purchased separately as yet. Colored buttons are used sparingly; one or two at the closing of coat or blouse, or one or two on the girdle are sufficient.

A Word or Two on Collars

The open throat for general wear is still a favorite and will probably hold its own until well into the winter. High collars, however, are being advocated by many of the leading dressmakers; not the perfectly straight choker or stock of a few years back, necessarily, although these are smart and becoming to many, but a collar closed at the top and open to below the curve of the throat. These are called "A" collars and are far more youthful and becoming to most than the old time high collar. Many women prefer the high collar for street wear, with tailored suit and hat, and even if it does not become universal, it will share favor with the low, open collar during the winter season.

The New Colored Blouse

One of the innovations of the season is the colored blouse or separate waist with the tailored suit. This fall is probably the outcome of the little chemisettes of pink and blue that we have been wearing with the taffeta frock and serge dress. I saw a particularly attractive combination at one of the tea rooms the other afternoon; it was a blouse of pale rose colored crepe de Chine, a shade between coral and old rose, and was worn with a dark blue serge suit. This blouse was made with tucks at the shoulders to give fullness over the bust and was trimmed down the front with a graduated frill of the crepe; the blouse closed with round nickel buttons. Around the high choker collar was twisted a piece of black satin ribbon, above which, reaching almost to the chin, showed the points of a stiff white under collar. Another suit of beige colored serge had a blouse of creamy yellow crepe embroidered with old rose silk. This fall of the contrasting blouse is practical and becoming and should appeal to many.

When Things Fade.
A powder comes for the purpose of restoring faded color to thin fabrics without dyeing them. It is sold in little pasteboard boxes in all the light colors—lavender, pink, blue, ecru and other pastelle shades. After you have washed the faded fabric until it is clean, you sprinkle some of this powder in the rinsing water and rinse the fabric until it has absorbed enough of the color. Of course, the powder has to be used each time the fabric is washed. But it is much easier and more satisfactory than a dye, that must be boiled in, for some things. Crepe de chine underwear, for instance, or negligee of a fragile sort, or flimsy blouses can be wonderfully freshened and brightened with this coloring powder.

Bank depositors and bank deposits are growing. 21,000 more in 1915 than 1914, with increased deposits of $18,000,000 in New York State alone.

The Republicans who were fooled back to the fold from the Washington camp were very much aggrieved to learn that Justice Hughes will not permit his name to go before the Republican convention in 1916.

The Du Pont Powder Company distributed $58,854,200 to its stockholders. A colossal sum for these hard times. Can any one imagine the amount for distribution if the times were good? It might be wise to reflect on this.

The commission on Industrial Relations has recommended that all wealth which exceeds $1,000,000 for any one person be turned back to the benefit of the people. The commission found out that 44 families in the United States have an annual income of $50,000,000 combined, while 1,900,000 people live on an annual salary of less than $1,000.

Suppose the people who are anxious for war stop talking for battle and advocate good roads. The war costs the European countries $400,000,000 a week which when multiplied by 52 weeks a year makes $20,800,000,000 a year. At $10,000 a mile, that sum would build 2,080,000 miles of macadam road. That would build 693 macadam highways through from the Atlantic to the Pacific. This would give Pennsylvania 40 roads from east to west or one every two miles distant, or we could have on this war expenditure a road as fine as they make them every 30 miles apart costing $30,000 a mile. Don't talk war; talk national improvement. War not only takes money, but lives as well. That is the greatest asset of any country. Then it takes the lives of our ablest people and leaves the mothers, sisters, aged and youth to shift for themselves as best they can. Better think twice or ten times for peace instead of one time for war.

We could again rebuild every school house in the United States and every church and make them fireproof and equip them with all the modern improvements, both country and city, regardless of the distance from water supply, and pay our teachers at the rate of $100 a month for nine months for the cost of the war to Europe. Does it pay to go to war?

Wait Paint

There are painters and waiters. Which am I going to do? Paint or wait?

Which is better? How much am I worth with my property waiting? How much if I paint? Will my house be worth more or less if I paint?

Say it costs $2 a gallon Devco—I wouldn't paint any other—and $3 or $4 more for putting it on. That's $50 or $60 a 10-gallon job.

The money is gone. Is it in the house? Is it all in the house?

Suppose I were selling; what should I get for that house fresh-painted and what should I get for it needing-paint?

I wonder why men paint before selling?

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Interesting Notes From Our Correspondent at National Capital.

Washington, D. C., August 31.—Assurance that Great Britain will relax the enforcement of her order in council so as to permit shipments from neutral ports of German and Austrian goods contracted for by Americans prior to the effective date of the order has been given the State Department by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice the British Ambassador. The Ambassador explained that arrangements would be made for accepting proof of contracts at the embassy here instead of requiring its production in London. Officials here are hopeful that this will make possible the release of millions of dollars' worth of American-owned goods of German or Austrian origin accumulated at neutral European ports, particularly Rotterdam.

Whether the concession about to be made by Great Britain will apply only to the goods at Rotterdam or be extended to goods contracted for that are still at the factory is not definitely known. The action of Great Britain is regarded as significant, and is taken as evidence that Great Britain is anxious to placate commercial interests in the United States.

The press dispatches from Berlin saying Germany had decided upon a policy in connection with the sinking of the Arabic, in accord with the recent statement of the imperial chancellor, were noted with satisfaction in official circles. But while Washington diplomatic officials are waiting for the report from the German government on the sinking of the Arabic, interest is centered chiefly in reports that there is a difference of opinion between Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Chancellor, and Admiral von Tirpitz of the admiralty, as to the course to be pursued.

The understanding here is that Admiral Von Tirpitz and the German Chancellor are agreed on the desirability of settling the controversy with the United States and maintaining peace. They are agreed on the necessity of Germany making substantial concessions to this end. The point that they differ on, according to the reports that have reached Washington, is in regard to disciplining the German submarine commander, if it turns out that he really is responsible for the destruction of the Arabic.

Some of the officials think they can see in Germany's change of policy a larger purpose than the mere maintenance of friendly relations with this government. They believe that Germany, if not actually seeking to pave the way for peace negotiations, is at least preparing herself for the day when such negotiations will be begun. As viewed by these officials and in diplomatic circles here, Germany is moving to rehabilitate herself in the eyes of neutrals, so that when a movement for peace is actually undertaken she may be assured of a larger measure of sympathy and support from neutral powers than would be accorded her now.

Favorable replies received here to the peace proposal from Zapata and his lieutenants and reliable reports concerning the disintegration of Carranza's organization foreshadow early and successful action by the Latin-American representatives in bringing peace to Mexico. It was stated in authoritative quarters that the next step in the pan-American program for the restoration of peace there would be taken in the near future, regardless of what might be the nature of General Carranza's belated reply to arrange a conference of Mexican military and political leaders. No inkling was given, however, of what form this next development would take.

Administration officials have let it be known that as soon as the Arabic crisis may be considered as settled, President Wilson will concentrate his attention on the national defense program. Strong pressure is being exerted upon the administration to adopt a conservative course in shaping the national defense policy. It has come to be accepted generally in well informed circles here that the recommendations to be submitted to the President by Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Secretary of War Garrison will call for the expenditure of approximately half a billion dollars. Senator Kern, of Indiana, Democratic leader of the Senate, who was a caller at the White House, declared emphatically that the sentiment of the people in his section of the country was against such an expenditure on warships and army increases. It is understood that the utterances of the majority leader of the Senate are in accord with the views of Representative Claude Kitchin, of North Carolina, slated to succeed Senator-elect Underwood in the House leadership. The word which comes from a high official source, however, is that the President has not wavered and that he is prepared to "go through" with the policy he has outlined.

Among the other numerous problems which now beset the administration, not the least perplexing is that of revenue to provide for the government's expenses, which must inevitably be largely increased if a heavy national defense budget goes through. The President is represented as being in favor of a short-term bond issue to raise the necessary funds. It has also been suggested that the President will recommend that the special war tax be continued for another year.

Members of many German societies in the United States are receiving military instruction according to rumors reported to the War Department, although Secretary Garrison declared that he knew nothing of the reports. Members of local German societies are vigorous in their denial of the reports, declaring them to be ridiculous and absurd.

The stories that President Wilson had broken with his friend and adviser, Col. E. M. House of New York and Texas, because of differences over the administration's Mexican policy, have been branded as false and foolish by Private Secretary to the President Tumulty. "It is all nonsense," said Secretary Tumulty. "The relations between the President and his friend, Colonel House, are of the closest and most friendly character. There has been no difference between them over Mexico or anything else."

Washington theater managers who conduct Sunday concerts endeavored to show the District authorities just how nearly they can conform to the new police regulations without waiting for them to become effective. Police officials attending the performances as censors were surprised that the managers should have taken the initiative and without waiting for any hints from the officials, cut out what the law makes objectionable.

Reappearance of flocks which have been absent for months is beginning to be noticed in shop, office, and promenade. The vanguard of those Washingtonians who hid themselves to mountain and seashore for the summer is returning, to re-enter their city homes for the winter.

The janitors of the various public school buildings have already commenced to paint around the school yards, in anticipation of the opening of the schools. Washington was included in the itinerary of the chilly wave, a precursor of autumn, which has had almost the entire country east of the Rockies in its grasp. The temperature was much lower than the seasonal average, being as low as 63 degrees.

President Wilson has given up all idea of a further extended vacation at Cornish, N. H., deciding to remain in Washington until the Arabic and other questions with Germany, and the proposed note of protest to England on delays to shipping as well as Mexican affairs, are in a more satisfactory condition. The President had planned to spend the whole month of September at Cornish. This idea has been abandoned for the present, although he may get away again for a few days.

The White House is having its annual fall cleaning. Curtains are being hung, carpets are being laid, and everything is being put in shape for the return of the Wilson family. Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, the President's cousin, will soon return to Washington, and Miss Margaret Wilson probably will close the Cornish home in about two weeks.

The Chinese Minister has gone to Middletown, Conn., to attend the conference of Chinese students from Eastern colleges and universities, which is to be held there this year. The conferences are held each year by the Chinese students in this country in order to foster a strong fraternal feeling among them, and to discuss educational problems which would be for the advancement of their own country.

Some Light as to Where Tariff Burden Rests.

Old Fallacy That the "Foreigner Pays the Tax" is Exploded—Truth Shown in Motor Car Trade With Canada.

Who pays the tariff?

There used to be a pleasant delusion that the "foreigner paid," the idea being, apparently, that European manufacturers loved us so much that they would pay from 50 to 150 per cent duties on their goods out of their own pockets, and never dream of adding the sum so paid to the final selling price. By way of commentary on that notion—not so popular now as it used to be—the Chicago Journal presents the following true story:

Down in Ohio there is an automobile firm which is trying hard to get a good Canadian trade. With good roads, vast distances and a prosperous people, Canada offers a splendid market for autos. Here, if anywhere, the foreigner ought to pay the tariff tax which Canadian legislators have placed on motor cars. Does the Ohio firm do it?

Not quite. It advertises thus:

Touring car, United States.... price.....$ 750
Touring car, Canadian price....1,050

The Canadian duty on automobiles is 42½ per cent. Forty-two and one-half per cent on the retail American price would come to $318.75, whereas the actual excess the Canadian customer pays for this Ohio car is only $300. The extra $18.75 probably comes out of the Canadian agent's commission.

Does the foreigner pay? He does not, and here is one firm honest enough to say so. The consumer pays, first, last and all the time. On automobiles, soap, blankets, matches, window glass and soothing sirup, the consumer pays.

Tried and Found Wanting.

Let us see. Why did not the Hanna Utopia perpetuate itself? The Dingley tariff, which was its legislative masterpiece, remained in force from 1897 to 1909. But it did not prevent a panic of disastrous proportions from rocking the business structure to its foundation in 1907, remarks the St. Louis Republic. In the year following the business man was still in the saddle and Taft was elected. No president ever "stood hitched" more meekly, as witness his indorsement of the Payne-Aldrich tariff at Winona. Yet this was the prelude to 1912. Those business men who rallied under Mark Hanna set the forces in motion that wrote the subsequent history of disaster to their party and partisanship.

Progressives Turn to Wilson.

The Detroit Times, which supported Roosevelt in 1912, now makes the editorial statement that the Progressives who followed his banner in that campaign find Wilson worthy of their support. After a survey of the political field, the Times sums up by saying: "It cannot be denied that it is President Wilson who is attracting to his aid those thinking, forward-looking, idealistic men, who, in 1912, voted not so much for Colonel Roosevelt as for the movement which he represented." On the whole, the Post should say that the Times' sump of the situation is fairly accurate of the tendency of the rank and file of the Progressives.—Washington Post.

National Prosperity.

Notwithstanding the dislocations of trade caused by the European war in some branches of industry, business throughout the United States during the last four weeks has continued in its improvement.

Bank clearances are greater; tonnage offered the railways are larger; the number of persons employed in the manufacturing establishments increases with every day that passes; the great coal strike in eastern Ohio, which for 13 months kept thousands of miners without employment, has been compromised, and these thousands have resumed work.

Campaign Thunder Weakens.

As business grows the tariff recedes in importance as an issue. It has been the plan of the Republicans to make their campaign on the tariff, but nothing will be more ludicrous in 1916 than shouting an empty dinner-pail if it is full or nearly so. It would have about as much effect as the beating of tin pans to scare away blue devils. The Republicans are beginning to realize this, and as a consequence are considerably disturbed.

Makes Discreet Selection.

Strange somehow, but when a G. O. P. presidential target mentions other promising marks he always picks the third-acters.

Business Prospects Bright.

The sun of prosperity is steadily rising and shining on all the great steel and iron industries grouped about the southern end of Lake Michigan—Illinois Steel, the Federal Furnace, the Wisconsin Steel, the Ironsquo Iron, the Bi-Product Coke and all the smaller companies. The Illinois Steel company is working about 6,500 of the 10,000 men it normally employs, and, instead of keeping them busy only three or four days a week, it recently put nearly all of them on a six-day basis.

The Result of a Reputation

"The Day of Theories is past.

"Events all over the world call for Men of Practical Minds.

"The farmer, the merchant, the manufacturer, the corporation, and especially is there a demand for Practical Men to fill public office."

The inventor of the Circular Saw.
Some discussion appeared recently in several British technical publications as to who invented the circular saw, and the claim is made that it was invented and used by a wood turner named Murray at Newcastle, England, about the year 1820. The first saw is described as having been about six inches in diameter, and was undoubtedly used on a wood turning lathe operated by water power. James Murray, the inventor, is said to have been the son of "Old Joe Murray," the favorite servant of Lord Byron.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—At a vestry meeting of the Market Square church Gail Sargent takes to a discussion about the sale of the church tenements to Edward E. Allison, local traction king, and when asked her opinion of the church by Rev. Smith Boyd, says it is apparently a lucrative business enterprise.

CHAPTER II—Allison takes Gail riding in his motor car. When he suggests that she is entitled to rest on the laurels of her achievements, she asks the disturbing question: "Why?"

CHAPTER III—Gail, returning to her Uncle Jim's home from her drive with Allison, finds cold disapproval in the eyes of Rev. Smith Boyd, who is calling there.

CHAPTER IV—At a boisterous party Gail finds the world uncomfortably full of men, and Allison tells Jim Sargent that his new ambition is to conquer the world.

CHAPTER V—Allison starts a campaign for consolidation and control of the entire transportation system of the world.

CHAPTER VI—Gail becomes popular and Aunt Helen thinks it necessary to advise her as to matrimonial probabilities.

CHAPTER VII—Allison gains control of transcontinental traffic and arranges to absorb the Vedder court tenement property of Market Square church.

CHAPTER VIII.

The Mine for the Golden Altar. Vedder Court was a very drunkard among tenement groups. Its decrepit old wooden buildings, as if weakened from dissipation and senile decay, leaned against each other crookedly for support, and leered down at the sodden swarms beneath, out of broken-paned windows which gave somehow a ludicrous effect of bleared eyes. There had once been a narrow strip of curbed soil in the center of the street, where three long-since-departed trees had given the quarter its name of "court," but this space was now as bare and dry as the asphalt surrounding it, and, as it was too small even for the purpose of children at play, a wooden bench, upon which no one had ever sat, as, indeed, why should they? had long ago been placed on it, to become loose-jointed and weather-splintered and rotted, like all the rest of the neighborhood.

As for its tenants; they were exactly the sort of birds one might expect to find in such foul nests. They were of many nations, but of just two main varieties: stupid and squalid, or thin and furtive; but they were all dirty, and they bore, in their complexions, the poison of crowded breathing spaces, and bad sewerage, and unwholesome or insufficient food.

Into this mire there drove an utterly out-of-place little electric coupe. At the wheel was the fresh-cheeked Gail Sargent and with her was the twinkling-eyed Rufus Manning, whose white beard rippled down to his second waistcoat button. They drove slowly the length of the court and back again, the girl studying every detail with acute interest. They stopped in front of Temple Mission, which with its ugly red and blue lettering nearly erased by years of monthly scrubbing, occupied an old store room once used as a saloon.

"So this is the chrysalis from which the butterfly cathedral is to emerge," commented Gail, as Manning held the door open for her, and before she rose she peered again around the uninviting "court," which not even the bright winter sunshine could relieve of its dinginess; rather, the sun made it only the more dismal by presenting the ugliness more in detail.

"This is the mine which produces the gold which is to gild the altar," asserted Manning, studying the sidewalk. "I don't think you'd better come in here. You'll spoil your shoes."

"I want to see it all this time because I'm never coming back," insisted Gail, and placed one daintily shod foot on the step.

"Then I'll have to shame Sir Walter Raleigh," laughed the silver-bearded Manning, and, to her gasping surprise, he caught her around the waist and lifted her across to the door, whereat several soiled urchins laughed, and one vinegary-faced old woman grinned, in horrible appreciation, and dropped Manning a familiarly respectful curtsy as he passed.

There was no one in the mission except a broad-shouldered man with a roughly hewn face, who ducked his head at Manning and touched his forehead to the side of his head. He was placing huge soup kettles in their noles in the counter at the rear of the room, and Manning called attention to this.

"A practical mission," he explained. "We start in by saving the bodies."

"Do you get any further?" inquired Gail, glancing from the empty benches and the atrociously colored "religious" pictures on the walls to the windows, past which eddied a mass of humanity all but submerged in hopelessness.

"Sometimes," replied Manning gravely. "I have seen a soul or two even here. It is because of these two or three possibilities that the mission is kept up. It might interest you to know that Market Square church spends fifteen thousand dollars a year in charity relief in Vedder court alone."

Gail's eyelids closed, her lashes curved on her cheeks for an instant, and the corners of her lips twitched.

"And how much a year does Market Square church take out of Vedder court?"

"I was waiting for that bit of impertinence," laughed Manning. "I shall be surprised at nothing you say since that first day when you characterized Market Square church as a remarkably lucrative enterprise. Have you never felt any compunctions of conscience over that?"

"Not once," answered Gail promptly. She had started to seat herself on one of the empty benches, but had changed her mind. "If I had been given to any such self-injustice, however, I should reproach myself now. I think Market Square church not only commercial but criminal."

"I'll have to give your soul a chastisement," smiled Manning. "These people must live somewhere, and because Vedder court, being church property, is exempt from taxation, they find cheaper rents here than anywhere in the city. If we were to put up improved buildings, I don't know where they would go, because we would be compelled to charge more rent."

"In order to make the same rate of profit," responded Gail. "Out of all this misery, Market Square church is reaping a harvest rich enough to build a fifty million dollar cathedral, and I have sufficient disregard for the particular deity under whom you do business, to feel sure that he would not destroy it by lightning. I want out of here."

"Frankly, so do I," admitted Manning; "although I'm ashamed of myself. It's all right for you, who are young, to be fastidious, but your Daddy Manning is coward enough to want to make his peace with heaven, after a life which put a few blots on the book."

She laughed at him speculatively for a moment, and then she laughed. "You know, I don't believe that, Daddy Manning. You're an old fraud, who does good by stealth, in order to gain the reputation of having been picturesquely wicked. Tell me why you belong to Market Square church."

"Because it's so respectable," he twinkled down at her. "When an old sinner has lost every other claim to respectability, he has himself put on the vestry."

He dropped behind on their way to the door, to surreptitiously slip something, which looked like money, to the man with the roughly hewn countenance, and as he stood talking, Rev. Smith Boyd came in, not quite breathlessly, but as if he had hurried.

"I knew you were here," he said, taking Gail's slender hand in his; then his eyes turned cold.

"You recognized my pink ribbon bows," and she laughed up at him frankly. "You haven't been over to sing lately."

"No," he replied. "Will you be at home this evening?"

"I'll have our music selected," and, in the very midst of her brightness, she was stopped by the sudden somberness in the rector's eyes.

Simple little conversation; quite trivial indeed, but it had been attended by much shifting thought. To begin with, the rector regretted the necessity of disapproving of a young lady so undeniably attractive. She was a pleasure to the eye and a stimulus to the mind, and always his first impulse when he thought of her was one of pleasure. An incident flashed back to him. The night of the toboggan party, when she had stood with her face upturned, and the moonlight gleaming on her round white throat. He had trembled, much to his later sorrow, as he fastened the scarf about her warm neck. However, she was the visiting niece of one of his vestrymen, who lived next door to the rectory.

Gail jerked her pretty head impatiently. If Rev. Smith Boyd meant to be as somber as this, she'd rather he'd stay at home. However, he was the rector, and her Uncle Jim was a vestryman, and they lived right next door.

"You just escaped a blowing up, Doctor Boyd," observed "Daddy" Manning, joining them, and his eyes twinkled from one to the other. "Our young friend from the West is harsh with the venerable Market Square church."

"Again?" and Rev. Smith Boyd was gracious enough to smile. "What is the matter with it this time?"

"It is not only commercial, but criminal," repeated Manning, with a sly smile at Gail, who now wore a little red spot in each cheek.

Rev. Smith Boyd's cold eyes turned green, as he glanced at this daring young person. In offending the dignity of Market Square church she offended his own.

"What would you have us do?" he quietly asked.

"Retire from business," she informed him, nettled by the covert sneer at her youth and inexperience. She laid aside a new perplexity for future solution. In moments such as this the rector was far from ministerial, and he displayed a quickness to anger quite out of proportion to the apparent cause. "The whole trouble with Market Square church is that they have no God. The creator has been reduced to a formula."

Daddy Manning saved the rector the pain of any answer.

"You're a religious anarchist," he charged Gail.

Her face softened.

"By no means," she replied. "I am a devoted follower of the divine spirit, the divine will, the divine law; but not of the church; for it has forgotten these things."

"You don't know what you are saying," the rector told her.

"That isn't all you mean," she retorted. "What you have in mind is that, being a woman, and young, I should be silent. You would not permit thought if you could avoid it, for when people begin to think, religion lives but the church dies, as it is doing today."

Now Rev. Smith Boyd could be triumphant. There was a curt sarcasm on his lips.

"Are you quite consistent?" he charged. "You have just been objecting to the prosperity of the church."

"Financially," she admitted; "but it is a spiritual bankruptcy. Your financial prosperity is a direct sign of your religious decay. Your financial bankruptcy will come later, as it has done in France, as it is doing in Italy, as it will do all over the world. Humanity treats the church with the generosity due a once valuable servant who has outlived his usefulness."

"My dear child, humanity can never do without religion," interposed Daddy Manning.

"Agreed," said Gail; "but it outgrows them. It outgrew paganism, idolatry, and a score of minor phases in between. Now it is outgrowing the religion of creed, in its progress toward morality. What we need is a new religion."

"You are blaming the church with a fault which lies in the people," protested the rector, shocked and disturbed, and yet feeling it his duty to set Gail right. He was ashamed of himself for having been severe with her in his mind. She was less frivolous than he had thought, and what she needed was spiritual instruction. "The people are lukewarm."

"What else could they be with the watery spiritual gruel which the church provides?" retorted Gail.

"I am interested in knowing what your particular new religion would be like," remarked Daddy Manning, his twinkling eyes resting affectionately on her.

"It would be a return to the simple faith in God," Gail told him reverently. "It is still in the hearts of the people, as it will always be; but they have nowhere to gather together and worship."

Daddy Manning laughed as he detected that bit of sarcasm.

"According to that we are wasting our new cathedral."

"Absolutely!" and it struck the rector with pain that Gail had never looked more beautiful than now, with her cheeks flushed and her brown eyes snapping with indignation. "Your cathedral will be a monument, built out of the profits wrung from squalor, to the vanity of your congregation. If I were the dictator of this wonderful city of achievement, I would decree that cathedral never to be built, and Vedder court to be utterly destroyed!"

"It is perhaps just as well that you are not the dictator of the city," the young Rev. Smith Boyd gazed down at her from his six feet of serious purpose, with all his previous disapproval intensified. "The history of Market Square church is rich with instances of its usefulness in both the spiritual and the material world, with evidence of its power for good, with justification for its existence, with reason for its acts. You make the common mistake of judging an entire body from one surface indication. Do you suppose there is no sincerity, no conscience, no consecration in Market Square church?" His deep, mellow baritone vibrated with the defense of his purpose and that of the institution which he represented. "Why do you suppose our vestrymen, whose time is of enormous value, find a space amid their busy working hours for the affairs of Market Square church? Why do you suppose the ladies of our guild, who have agreeable pursuits for every hour of the day, give their time to committee and charity work?" He paused for a hesitant moment. "Why do you suppose I am so eager for the building, on American soil, of the most magnificent house of worship in the world?"

Gail's pretty upper lip curled.

"Personal ambition!" she snapped, and, without waiting to see the pallor which struck his face to stone, she heeled her way out through the mud to her coupe.

CHAPTER IX.

The Storm Center of Magnetic Attraction.

"Brother Bones," said Interlocutor Ted Teasdale commandingly, with his knuckles on his right knee and his elbow at the proper angle.

"Yes, sir, Mr. Interlocutor," replied Willis Cunningham, whose "black-face makeup" seemed marvelously absurd in connection with his brown vandyke.

"Brother Bones, when does everybody love a storm?"

"I don't know, Mr. Interlocutor," admitted Brother Bones Cunningham, touching his kinky wig with the tip of one finger. "When does everybody love a storm?"

Interlocutor Ted Teasdale roved his eye over the assemblage, of fifty or more, in his own ballroom, and smiled in a superior fashion. The ebony-faced semicircle of impromptu minstrels, banded together that morning, leaned forward with anticipatory grins. They had heard the joke in rehearsal. It was a corker!

"When it's a Gail," he replied, whereat Gail Sargent, at whom everybody looked and laughed, flushed prettily, and the bones and tambos made a flourish, and the interlocutor announced that the Self Help Glee club would now sing that entrancing ditty, entitled "Marry Had a Little Calf."

It was only in the blossom of the evening at Ted Teasdale's country house, the same being about eleven o'clock, and the dance was still to begin. Lucile Teasdale's vivid idea for making her house party notable was to induce their guests to amuse themselves; and their set had depended upon hired entertainers for so long that the idea had all the charm of distinct novelty. Fine? No end of it! One could always be sure of having a lively time around Lucile and Ted Teasdale and Arly Fosland. Gerald Fosland was at this party. Fine chap, Gerald, and beautifully decent in his attentions to Arly. Pity they were so rotten bored with each other; but there you were! Each should have married a blonde.

Gail Sargent fairly scintillated with enjoyment. She had never attended so brilliant a house party. Her own set back home had a lot of fun, but this was in some way different. The people were no more clever, but there were more clever people among them; that was it. There had been a wider range from which to pick, which was why, in New York there were so many circles, and circles within circles.

The men whom Lucile and Arly had collected were an especial joy. They had all the accomplished outward symbols of fervor without any of its oppressive insistence. Gail, as an agreeable duty to her new found self, experimented with several of them, and found them most amusing and pleasant, but nothing more disturbing.

Dick Rodley was the most persistent, and, in spite of the fact that he was so flawlessly handsome as to excite ridicule, Gail found herself, by and by, defending him against her own iconoclastic sense of humor. He reached her after the minstrel show, while Houston Van Ploon and Willis Cunningham were still struggling profanely with their burnt cork, and he stole her from under the very eyes of Jack Larby, while that smitten youth was exchanging wit, at a tremendous loss, with caustic Arly Fosland.

"Have you seen the new century plant in the conservatory?" Dick asked, beaming down at her, his black eyes glowing like coals.

He strolled with Gail to the seat behind the rose screen, but it was fully engaged, and he led the way out toward the geranium above.

"Where is the century plant?" He was a tremendously pleasant fellow. When she walked through a crowded room with Dick, she knew, from the looks of admiration, just what people were saying; that they were an extraordinary handsome couple.

"There is no century plant," he shamelessly confessed.

"I knew it," and she laughed. "I don't mind admitting that it was a point-blank lie," he cheerfully told her. "I wanted to get you out here alone, all to myself," and his voice went down two tones. He did it so prettily!

"My happy, happy childhood days," laughed Gail. "The boys used to talk that way on the way home from school."

"I don't doubt it," and Dick smiled appreciatively. "The dullest sort of a boy would find himself saying nice things to you; but I shall stop it."

"Oh, please don't!" begged Gail. "You are so delightful at it."

He pounced on a corner half hidden by a tub of ferns. There was no bench there, but it was at least semi-isolated, and he leaned gracefully against the window ledge, looking down at her earnestly as she stood, slenderly outlined against the green of the ferns, in her gown of delicate blue sparkling with opalescent flakes.

"That's just the trouble," he complained. "I don't wish you to be aware that I am saying what you call pretty things. I wish, instead, to be effective," and there was a roughness in his voice which had come for the first time. She was a trifle startled by it, and she lowered her eyes before the steady gaze which he poured down on her. Why, he was in earnest!

"Then take me to Lucile," she smiled up at him, and strolled in toward the ballroom.

Willis Cunningham met them at the door.

"You promised me the first dance," he breathlessly informed Gail. He had been walking rapidly.

"I've the second one, remember, Gail," Dick reminded her, as he glanced around the ballroom for his own partner, but Gail distinctly felt his eyes following her as she walked away with Cunningham.

"I know now of what your profile reminds me," Cunningham told her; "the Chameaux 'Praying Nymph.' It is the most spiritually beautiful of all the pictures in the Louvre."

"I wonder which is the stronger emotion in me just now," she returned; "gratified vanity or curiosity."

"I hope it's the latter," smiled Cunningham. "I recall now a gallery in which there is a very good copy of the Chameaux canvas, and I'd be delighted to take you."

Catarrh caused by a germ.

How to Destroy the Germ and End Disease.

To cure catarrh so it won't come back you must, according to a noted authority, first drive from your body the millions of germs that are flourishing in the inner recesses of your nose and throat and are causing the disease.

There is a preparation which does this called Hymeyl (pronounced High-o-me). Hymeyl is a germ killing vaporized air formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. You breathe Hymeyl through the mouth and nose by means of a little hard rubber inhaler which druggists furnish with it. This medicated germicidal air penetrates into every fold and crevice of the mucous membrane of your nose and throat, kills the catarrh germs that lodge there, soothes, reduces and heals the swollen inflamed membranes, stops the discharge and opens up the clogged nose and air passages in a truly wonderful way. F. W. Jordan, Jr., and many other leading druggists in Bedford and vicinity sell Hymeyl with the positive guarantee that it must cure catarrh or that the money paid for it will be refunded.—Adv. 3 Sept. 21.

A STARTLING NOVEL

"The Pirates of the Sky" to be Published in Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The most thrilling and momentous novel written since Rider Haggard's "King Solomon's Mines," is "The Pirates of the Sky," a speculative tale of fiction by Stephen Gaillard, who writes of the possibilities of air-craft in brigandage. With a well-worked-out plot the author has shown what might ensue if outlaws were to gain control of the largest and swiftest aeroplanes known to the world. The story tells of raids on the principal American cities, where with bombs and gunnery the inhabitants were terrorized and then the banks looted, etc. Millionaires and women are kidnapped and carried off to an inaccessible valley in South America. The band of cultured outlaws has sworn to overturn all governments. The chief is a Russian Nihilist. Dissensions and intrigue enter the oath-bound society, and its disintegration has already begun when an Indiana aviator and a Chicago newspaper reporter find the lair and with the help of earthquakes and volcanic eruptions clear the world of its greatest enemy. A pretty love story runs through an all-absorbing plot. "The Pirates of the Sky" will begin serial publication in The Pittsburgh Dispatch, Monday, September 6, 1915. You must read it. INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By O. E. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Course of the Moody Bible Institute.)

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 5

ELIJAH AND THE PROPHETS OF BAAL.

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 18:30-39. GOLDEN TEXT—Jehovah is far from the wicked but he heareth the prayer of the righteous. Prov. 15:29 R. V.

Following the lesson of last week we have (ch. 18:1-16) the interesting account of Ahab's search for Elijah and of the prophet's meeting with Obadiah. Verses 5 and 6 suggest the severity of the drought in the land. Ahab's accusation, "Art thou he that troublest Israel," is replied to by Elijah's challenge regarding a contest between himself, the representative of Jehovah, and the king's prophets representing Baal, (vv. 17-25). In accordance with the stipulations the prophets of Baal accepted the challenge and most miserably failed (vv. 26-29). The place of this dramatic contest was Mt. Carmel (see map) and the time probably B. C. 908.

I. Elijah's Preparation vv. 30-35.

On Carmel's crown now swarms a countless throng With one brave soul to stand for God 'Gainst millions in the wrong. —George L. Taylor.

Elijah gave the 450 prophets of Baal and the 400 priests of the groves (v. 19) every advantage possible that he might the more clearly unmask their error and make more signal their defeat. Their frenzied cries and self-injury continued fruitlessly until 3:00 p. m. Then Elijah announces the details which were to remove all possible doubt as to whose champion he was or who is to answer his petition. (a) He calls the people together (v. 30) drawing them nigh to God and challenging their undivided attention after the confusion produced by the priests and their consternation over their defeat. (b) He constructs the altar (vv. 30-31). Any true and lasting reformation must begin at the altars of God. Restore one in the heart, the home and church and there will return to all unity and strength. Note Elijah's insistence upon an undivided nation, as suggested by the "twelve stones." While any lasting reformation must begin in the individual heart, still if it is true and genuine it will work itself out in the nation. "Israel shall be thy name." The "prince that prevails with God," who had wrought for their fathers, who answered Jacob's prayer, is now about to answer Elijah. This altar was not constructed as a monument to departed one, nor for the ornamentation of the house of God. It was in God's first cathedral and for his glory alone. On this altar Elijah placed his sacrifice.

Again Israel is to prevail over its enemies, this time those within, not those from without. (c) He covered the altar (vv. 33,34) e. g., poured water upon it to remove all possible accusation of fraud or trickery. The trench "as great as would contain two measures of seed" (v. 32) is equivalent to six gallons. Three times water was taken from the spring, still flowing at this place, and poured upon the altar, twelve jars in all again symbolizing the twelve tribes.

II. Elijah's Prayer, vv. 36,37. The great prophet even could only secure through prayer his desired blessing though its purpose was "that this people may know that thou Lord art God." His prayer was: (a) Addressed to God; (b) Grounded upon experience, that of "Abraham, Isaac and Jacob;" (c) It was for one purpose, the honor of that name; (d) It was to sanction his act in calling forth the drought upon Israel as a punishment for the sins of princes, priests and people; (e) It was founded upon the word of Jehovah, to corroborate and to affirm the works done "at thy word;" (f) It was for the conversion of the people that their hearts might be turned back to Jehovah once more.

Elijah, the man of faith, staked his all upon the Word of God, he gave himself up wholly to the plans and purposes of God, and relied explicitly upon the covenant-keeping God.

III. God's Power, vv. 38-40. We are confident Elijah had never seen fire fall and that he must have realized the awful catastrophe involved if it did not fall. Yet he fearlessly makes his plea and the fire fell. It was not an accidental stroke of lightning. God, the creator, worked upon the laws of nature, his servant, and wrought confusion to his enemies. It would be a strange God and father who could not use his own laws and creation to produce a moral effect.

The abundance of proof was that not only the offering, but the water and the very stones of the altar were consumed. "Rising all, all is won."

What we need everywhere is men who will follow in Elijah's steps in order that the fire of God may come upon us. There remained no longer any doubt, God is God, Baal is a sham.

So they "fell on their faces," yet in spite of the victories of God men today refuse to render unto him like obedience and worship.

Compare in this connection the fire of God's holy spirit which came upon the apostles and believers at Pentecost and the resultant convicting power convincing the people of Jerusalem that the crucified Christ was the son of God.

Mutt and Jeff Cutting Up Again

"What did Mutt and Jeff do today?" is again the daily question; it is quite as common as "What is new in the war?" And a good laugh always goes with Mutt and Jeff.

These greatest fun makers are again cutting up their comical capers in The Pittsburgh Gazette Times. They are a scream of course, for there never was another so comical a comic as "Bud" Fisher makes of these creatures of his brain and pen.

Mutt and Jeff are human, they are irresistible in their appeal. In The Gazette Times they are another big feature added to the big things that characterize Pittsburgh's One Big Newspaper. "Bud" Fisher's Mutt and Jeff humor is always fresh; you never have to hunt for the laugh. You are never shocked. Mutt and Jeff are the One Big Daily Comic. That's why they are in the Pittsburgh Gazette Times.

The President Judgeship and the Wet and Dry Controversy

It has been frequently explained in the papers during this campaign, that no candidate for judge has the right to pledge himself as to how he will stand on the liquor question, because a judge is sworn to do impartial justice between the parties, and he cannot do this if he has been pledged to one side or the other in advance.

It has seemed to me, however, that in a contest in this county, where we have a President Judge and an Associate to be elected, that this contest between the wets and dries, if it has any standing at all, can be fought out with the Associates.

It would certainly seem highly improper to raise the question of the fitness of the candidate for President Judge, and elect or defeat that candidate on the liquor question.

The President Judgeship should not, certainly, be involved in this kind of a contest.

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has said that a Judge cannot take his seat who has made any pledge before his election.

The newspapers have been full of articles showing the danger of electing a President Judge on that question alone.

Let us elect the President Judge on his qualifications, his standing as a lawyer, and his ability to so conduct the courts as to speedily determine judicial questions and save and economize the time of the court.

I believe that Thomas F. Bailey will be able to accomplish these things. Voter. (Adv.)

Clearville

August 31—S. B. Fluke of Woodbury and Mr. Martin of Saxton tarried all night in our village on Monday en route to Mann Township for a road view.

The schools in our village and Monroe Township will open on September 20.

Rev. Lewis O. Duvall of Akersville, Fulton County, preached in the M. E. Church at this place Sunday evening.

There is apparently no change in Harvey Grubb's condition.

On Monday the children of John Weimer of this place held a family reunion. His health has been very much impaired for more than a year, hence the children thought they would have a reunion of the family. All the children and all but one of the grandchildren were here.

The present were Mr. and Mrs. John Weimer and Miss Bertha Weimer of Clearville, Mr. and Mrs. Top Weimer and children, Marie, Vera and Robert of Clearfield; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Weimer and son Palmer, also of Clearfield; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ellicker and sons, Joseph and Richard, of Harrisburg; Mr. and Mrs. Ira E. Weimer and children, Blair and Helen of Chaneyville; Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Barkman and sons, Royle and Carl, and Mr. and Mrs. George Cornell and children, Ethel, Roy, Raymond, Chalmer and their baby brother, all of Everett Route 3. Mr. Weimer seemed to enjoy having his children around him once more. The day was pleasant and all present will not soon forget it.

The Ray's Hill and Southern Pennsylvania Christian Conference, composed of eight ministers, four licentiates, 29 congregations and 2,421 members in 1914, was in session at this place from Wednesday afternoon until Sunday afternoon. A. C. Peck of Hancock, Md., was President, Scott Bottomfield of Hancock R. F. D. No. 3, Vice President; F. M. Diehl of Everett Route 6, Secretary, and U. J. Bennett of Everett Route 4, Treasurer. Along with the regular business there were also a number of interesting addresses and sermons as follows: The address of welcome by Rev. Edward F. Mellett, pastor local, Wednesday afternoon. In the evening Rev. A. W. May of Belle Grove, Md., preached the sermon. Thursday morning at 11 o'clock Rev. T. P. Garland of Needmore made the annual address. In the evening Rev. J. T. Burnett, D. D., of Dayton, O., preached the communion sermon, which was followed by the conference communion. On Friday at 11 a. m. Rev. A. R. Garland of Belle Grove, Md., preached the sermon. In the evening Mrs. J. F. Burnett of Dayton, O., gave a very interesting address on Missions. On Saturday a memorial service was held at 11 a. m. in memory of Rev. John H. Barney and Rev. James W. Troutman, two members of the Conference who died since its last meeting. The principal address was delivered by Rev. J. F. Burnett, D. D. He was followed by Revs. A. R., W. C. and T. P. Garland, Mr. H. M. Barton, Rev. G. M. Frownfelter and Rev. D. G. Hetrick. The climax of the conference was reached on Sunday. It was then that all the roads led to Clearville, like they did to ancient Rome, and brought the largest crowd here that has been here for years. There were two sermons, both preached by Dr. J. F. Burnett. In the morning he preached on Eph. 4: 3, the unity of the Church. In the afternoon he preached on the essentials of the Church. Both sermons were excellent and listened to with the closest attention by the large audiences that greeted him. The church did not hold one-third of the people present. The next conference will be held at Gapsville. During the year there were 325 additions to the membership, and the contributions for benevolence was $326.10 or $118.89 more than last year. A few conference thoughts: No one wants to be forgotten, as is shown by the tomb stones and monuments in our cemeteries. Jesus told his disciples to remember him and used the last supper as the occasion and means for such a remembrance. The autograph albums some years ago so popular were intended to keep green the memory of friends. Brothers Barney and Troutman seem to say to you remember us, for the work that we did in your conference. Let us not forget them not the sacrifices that they made in this conference; let us not forget their earnest prayers, their inspiring singing, and their exhortations and their labors of love. The world is essentially one. God has placed the sturdy oaks, the stately pines, the hardy ash and the scrubby thorn bushes in the forests. Now suppose we would take the oaks and place them by themselves and the pines in a place by themselves, and the ash in a place by themselves, and the thorns by themselves, you would lose the unity and harmony of the forests. God's church is one, but men have placed the Baptists in a place or body by themselves, the Presbyterians in a body by themselves, the Methodists by themselves, and so on, but the Church is one. Jesus prayed that all the disciples might be one as he and the Father were one, and do we not sing "Our aims, our fears, our hopes are one, our comfort and our cares?"

There will be a union district Sunday School Convention in the grove east of Clearville, or if it is damp, in the M. E. Church at this place next Sunday morning, afternoon and evening. All the Sunday Schools in the district should be represented by delegates. There will be an interesting program. Gideon.
